Case Study

Hugh McClurg, Barr Quarries

Hugh McClurg has been employed by Barr Quarries for thirty years and currently is Quarry Manager for three quarries in South West Scotland. He is responsible for all activities within the quarries including production, health & safety and environmental issues.

Hugh has taken part in a number of training courses over the years.

Since May 2007 there has been significant investment in plant, equipment and systems of work in Barr Quarries and it was agreed that quarry managers and staff would benefit from an integrated training system to ensure they work towards the same goal.

Hugh is now working towards his NVQ Level 4 Health Safety & Environmental Management. This will enable him to be more proactive in the management of health & safety and environmental issues. This course will also give Hugh the skills and knowledge to achieve the goals set out by management including achieving ISO 14001 accreditation for the quarries he manages.
